

Roundup® Agricultural Herbicides for Quail Program Enrollment

Now, for every gallon of Roundup® agricultural brand herbicides you purchase (between September 1, 2006 and August 31, 2007) for your conservation acres, Monsanto will donate $1.00 in your name to the Quail Conservation Collaboration (QCC) to help restore Northern bobwhite quail populations. The QCC members include three conservation leaders: Quail Forever, Tall Timbers Research Station and The Southeast Quail Study Group.

Enrolling is simple. The time you take to complete this form will ensure that contributions will be made in your name to protect this endangered symbol of agriculture.

- There are over 2.75 million conservation acres eligible for Monsanto's Roundup Agricultural Herbicide contribution.
- In addition to the $1.00 for every gallon of Roundup purchased for conservation acres, Monsanto is donating $75,000 annually to the QCC to fund habitat research.
- Quail is so important to agriculture, a habitat restoration plan was established by Congress and included within the 2002 Farm Bill.
- Quail Forever is a division of Pheasants Forever, Inc. It is a national non-profit comprised of local chapters and rated as a 4-star charity—the highest possible designation. Quail Forever is dedicated to the protection and enhancement of quail and other wildlife populations in North America.
- Tall Timbers Research Station researches the ecology of fire and natural resource management in the southeastern coastal plain.
- The Southeast Quail Study Group is comprised of wildlife agencies from across the southeastern U.S. and is responsible for the Northern Bobwhite Conservation Initiative—a plan that provides a landscape-scale road map for recovering quail populations to their 1980 levels.
